Interact-TV hits new sales record in November 2005

Sales up 480% over one year ago

Westminster, CO, December 21, 2005. Interact-TV (OTC: ITVI), a leading developer of Linux-based Home Entertainment Servers has announced a record month in November, 2005 with an increase of over 480% from the same month a year ago.

Telly Home Entertainment Servers allow consumers to easily store, share, manage and enjoy digital media throughout their home. Telly servers are designed for any room in the home and are fully scaleable with up to 1.2 Terabytes of storage. Telly's comprehensive features include a PVR and digital video library which serves stored DVDs, recorded TV programs, home videos and Internet downloaded videos. The included music and digital photo libraries can store entire music and photo collections. Telly can be accessed directly from a TV connected to it and shared with networked TellyVizion Playback units and PCs throughout the home network.

To handle increased demand for Telly Home Entertainment Servers, Interact-TV has partnered with AMAX Information Technologies, one of the top 25 system integrators in the US. AMAX is now acting as a contract manufacturer for Interact-TV products.

"Working with AMAX Information Technologies has been a positive experience," says Ken Fuhrman, CEO of Interact-TV. "We have been able to increase our sales volume, improve product quality and time to market. We look forward to a successful ongoing partnership."
